The brand

Therapy where the honest thing gets said, kindly.

Honestly, Vaibhav

The name is the promise. “Honestly” is how you work: no sugarcoating, no jargon, no pretending a hard thing is easy. “Vaibhav” is who people come for, because a personal practice is built on a person, not a clinic.

Everything in this system serves that: a doorway you can walk into, letters rather than adverts, and one deep red used only where something matters.

Five words

Honest

Safe

Premium

Relatable

Modern

Who it speaks to

Adults and couples who want a space to think out loud, in English, Hindi or Hinglish. People who want perspectives, not advice.

How it should feel

Understood, then motivated. Warm enough to stay, direct enough to trust.

Logo

An open doorway with a V inside: the arch is the safe space, the oxblood V is the person who walks in. The wordmark is your sign-off.

Primary logo

Stacked, for square spaces

The mark alone

Profile pictures: paper for Instagram, ink for YouTube

Clear space

Leave space around the logo at least as wide as the doorway.

Smallest sizes

Full logo: 140 px on screen, 35 mm in print. The mark alone: 24 px. Below that, drop the wordmark.

Logo in use

The sage arch stays on every background. Only the V changes: on ink and on oxblood it turns paper, because oxblood on oxblood would disappear.

Please don't

- Stretch, rotate or add shadows.
- Recolour outside this palette.
- Retype the wordmark in another font.

On photographs

Never straight onto a busy picture. Put it on a paper or ink panel first, or use the mark alone in a corner.

Files

SVG for anything that scales, PNG for everything else. Both carry transparent backgrounds, so they sit on any brand colour.

Colour

Paper and ink from an honest letter, stone for the quiet moments, one deep red for what matters. Sage belongs to the logo, so the green always means you.

Paper	Ink	Oxblood	Stone	Sage
#F3EEE4 RGB 243 238 228 Backgrounds, most of every page.	#17181C RGB 23 24 28 Text, dark panels, YouTube.	#7B2332 RGB 123 35 50 The V, quote marks, buttons, the margin rule.	#D3CABB RGB 211 202 187 Soft panels, tags, quiet sections.	#7D8F74 RGB 125 143 116 The logo's arch and hairlines only.

How much of each

Oxblood stays rare. That is what makes it land.

Text that stays readable

Type

Fraunces says the important thing, like a line from a letter. Plus Jakarta Sans explains it plainly. Both are free, so they work in Canva, Figma and on the website.

Therapists aren't here to solve your life.

No. Therapy isn't only for a crisis. It's a space to think out loud, before things pile up.

Posts

Five templates for carousels and stories. The type does the work: one honest line, a quote mark, and the sign-off. Wording here is a sample.

Covers

Paper with ruled lines and the oxblood margin. One idea, one big line, the sign-off.

Inside slides

Alternate stone and ink so a carousel has rhythm. Questions in oxblood, answers in plain text.

Stories

Oxblood for quotes and booking, ink for community and events. Always one clear button.

Voice

How the brand sounds, in posts, captions, emails and on the website.

Say it straight

No sugarcoating and no jargon. If it's a myth, call it a myth, then explain why.

Talk the way people think

English, Hindi or Hinglish, mixed naturally. "Therapy sirf 'serious' problems ke liye nahi hoti."

Warm, not soft

Direct doesn't mean cold. Start with understanding, then say the true thing.

Backed by evidence

Only what research supports. No controversy for reach, and never a client's story.

Sounds like us

- "Here's what therapy actually is."
- "You don't need the right words to start."
- "Perspectives, not advice."
- Ending with "Honestly, Vaibhav".

Not us

- "Fix your life in 5 steps."
- Diagnosing people or calling them "toxic" online.
- Words like "crazy" or "weak", even as jokes.
- Clickbait, before-and-after promises, testimonials.

Use it the way you work: honestly, and the same way every time.

Honestly, Vaibhav
